ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS
by Olive Roberts Berken

"And now," said the big lobster, when Nancy and Nick had eaten their lunch in the under-sea palace of the Bohadil Jinn, "won't you tell me your story? I've got a few minutes to spare."

So the twins told about their travels, how they were on an errand to rescue the toys Satchel Smith had stolen from Santa Claus at the North Pole, and how the wicked Jinn was doing all he could to prevent them from continuing their journey.

"That's too bad!" said the lobster. "I'm no friend of the Jinn's myself, although I am cooking for him. He says that if I don't do it, he'll cause a volcano to boil the ocean and that means the end of me. I can't stand hot water. So I just say, 'Hedge-ho,' and keep on. Let's see! Where did you say that you left your box with all your charms in it?"

"Outside the wall, under a big cockle-shell," said Nancy. "We could get it if we had our Magic Green Shoes but they have disappeared."

"Suppose you both get on my back," said the lobster. "I'll ride you over the wall!"

"Oh!" said the lobster, "what a pity you haven't a flat tail. They are so convenient. They let you swim upwards and backwards and any old way, always keeping two eyes open behind you. I don't know what I should do without mine." Then suddenly he exclaimed, "I have it! I shall get you the carved box myself! I can get over the high wall in a minute, hunt your box and be back before the Jinn gets home for his supper. He will come back from his Ice Palace at the North Pole on the Northern Lights, sliding the whole way on his golden beams. He'll be on time tonight, because he will be wishing to know if you are safe. And now I've another idea. Suppose you both get on my back. I'll ride you over the wall."

At the close of 1920 the United States had a trade balance in its favor of two and three-quarter billion dollars.

healed my skin trouble
Resinol

"Now I don't have to avoid people because of embarrassing skin trouble, or lie awake hours at night, tormented by intense itching. Resinol Ointment did it! After the first application of this soothing ointment, I felt such blessed relief. In a short time the inflammation was reduced and the itching stopped. Now my skin is entirely gone. I used Resinol Soap as directed with it and have found Resinol Shaving Stick to be the best on the market for a clean, easy shave." Resinol trio at all druggists.

SPRING FROCKS SHOW WAIST
LINE LONGER THAN EVER

It is very evident that we are going to have every chance this spring to observe how attractive lace and silk can be when made together.

Here are two dance frocks that were sketched from the new "Greenwich Village Polies." The first is of apricot taffeta brought into a frill of lace at the foot to give it a new version of the harem effect.

In the corsage an all-over pattern lace is laid over the taffeta, and a scalloped girle of the same lace and taffeta is adjusted in such a way as to give the long-waisted effect that is in such vogue.

In the second model a corsage of dark blue velvet tops a skirt of lace flouncing and the long waist is emphasized by a narrow belt of the velvet which heads a frill of lace.

The third frock is also of lace, this time combined with net. A diagonal mesh net top and lace with the simplest of thread patterns is the material. The long waist is emphasized by a girle of roses with rich dark leaves.

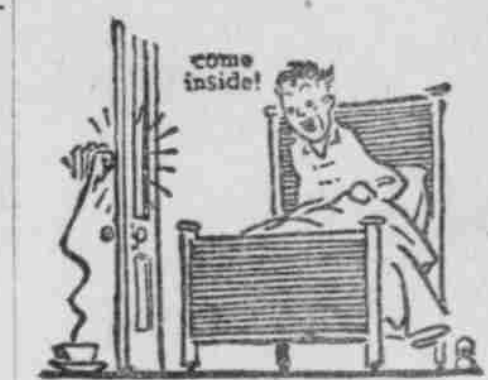

Sister Mary's
KITCHEN

Before putting on new wall paper in the spring the old paper should be removed. This seems like a big job, but it's one of the things a housekeeper can do herself and save money by doing.

Make a thin paste, thinner than for starch, of flour and water. Put this paste on the wall with an old white-wash brush. The heat and dampness cause the paper to draw and crack on the wall. With a wide putty knife it's perfectly easy to scrape the soiled paper off.

Ann's Plan Works Too Well

"When I said I was Jim Lorimer's wife the store detectives only laughed at me," Ann, with hat and coat thrown aside, looked particularly childish as she sat on the end of the bunk nearest her cell door. "Why, Jane, those men wouldn't even bother to find out if I was telling them the truth. They simply announced that my little game of giving a w. k. name wouldn't go with them! No Lorimer woman would look at what I had taken, they said!"

Ann was quite solemn at last. Plainly the hard bunk, the bars, the prison smell, the gray light, the cursing of a drunken woman in a lower corridor had destroyed whatever sense of the absurd Ann had at first attached to her prank.

"Martha is down at the office," I announced, "and after she gets you out—if she ever does—don't you dare tell Jim about this affair!"

"I'm afraid I haven't thought about Jim today," she confessed. "Of course, he'd better not know."

"Such a confession! It angered me. I wanted to walk away and let the girl take her medicine. With an effort I spoke pleasantly."

"Before Marjorie gets here, tell me how you got here!"

"I just wanted the experience! That's all! I wanted it for the play I am writing. You see, I've made my heroine a welfare worker who clerks for the experience. She decides that it is easy to steal, tells her employer she's going to do it, some day, and returns the articles by parcel post. She bets she can do it and tries it—and gets caught. She goes to jail, is convicted and loses her lover! Well, Ann, said I never could write about a jail until I had been in a jail. So I thought I would do just what my heroine is going to do—and—here I am. My plan worked!" Ann spoke triumphantly. "Evidently."

"Jane, I thought it wasn't going to! I had to steal three articles before that plaguey store detective would pay any attention to me! It took most of the morning!" "When at last she asked me to go with her to an upstairs office, say, Jane, I got cold feet! I explained it all to her, but she was perfectly stupid! I offered to pay for the trash, but she wouldn't listen. Then I suddenly decided to give a false name. I told the men in the office that I was 'Pearl Blanchard' and they all laughed most impudently! Then I got cold all over and told them my real name, but they said I couldn't burlesque them! So here I am!"

"Martha will soon have you out! Such was the comfort I offered. Ann jumped up and came to the bars of her cell."

"No, Jane! Here I'm going to stay tonight! Do you think I'll leave this jail so soon, after all the bother of getting into it?"

Villa has gathered about him all the old-time bandit and revolutionary elements which were identified with his campaigns. They are all welcomed but he does not tolerate idleness and every man is put to some kind of useful labor upon the hacienda.

The freight traffic of the New York Central lines in 1920 was greater than that carried by all the railroads of England and France.

Many fishermen are reported to have left the Newfoundland banks because of the low prices received for their catches.
